Although personal vehicles are not ideal habitats for bed bugs, they may enter through:

- A guest traveler with bed bugs
- Infested personal items
- Luggage from travel
- Items picked up at secondhand stores

Bed bugs may find their way beneath floor carpet, into electrical, headliners, door panels and other areas.

Public Transportation, buses, subways, limos, taxis, airplanes are becoming more susceptible to bed bugs crawling off people's personal clothing or possessions and infiltrating many areas.

Although bed bugs by nature like to harbor in areas that don't get a lot of movement, they will harbor where people frequent the most and that is seating areas.

When people travel and carry luggage, or backpacks, bed bugs can attach to them and crawl off while stored in trunks of taxis, luggage shelters beneath buses or in overhead bins in airplanes.

Items stored under the seat of an airplane are vulnerable if bed bugs have crawled off personal items from a previous passenger.
